SUMNER AND MOTLEY

The Senator's Protest.

The following is the suppressed speech of Senator Sumner to which many references have of late been made The circumstances under which it was prepared and suppressed were stated by the eminent author himself in the subjoined note the [illegible] from which the N Y Tribune reproduces

To the Reader—This statement was prepared in March shortly after the debate in the Senate but was withheld at that time from unwillingness to take part in the controversy while the friends regarded the question of principle involved is above every personal issue Yielding at last to various pressure Mr Sumner concluded to present it at the recent called session of the Senate but the Treaty with Great Britain and the case of the new paper correspondents were so engrossing as to leave no time for anything else

MR SUMNER—While I was under trial before the Senate on articles of impeachment presented by the Senator from Wisconsin (Mr Howe) I forbore taking my part in the debate even in reply to allegations asserted to be of decisive importance, touching my relations with the President and Secretary of State All this was trivial enough but numerous appeals to me from opposite parts of the country show that good people have been diverted by these allegations from the question of principle involved Without intending in any way to revive the heat of that debate I am induced to make a plain statement of facts so that the precise character of those relations shall be known I do this with unspeakable reluctance but in the discharge of a public duty where the claims of patriotism are above even those of self defense The Senate and the country have an interest in knowing the truth of this matter and so also has the Republican party which cannot be indifferent to pretension in its name nor will anything but the completest frankness be proper for the occasion

In overcoming this reluctance I am aided by Senator who are determined to make me speak The Senator from Wisconsin (Mr Howe) who appears as prosecuting officer after alleging these personal relations as the gravamen of accusation against me—making the issue pointedly on this floor and actually challenging reply—not content with the opportunity of this Chamber hurried to the public press where he repeated the accusation and now circulates it as I am told under his frank crediting it in formal terms to the liberal paper in which it appeared but without allusion to the editorial refutation which accompanied it On still another occasion, appearing still as prosecuting officer the same Senator volunteered out of his own invention to denounce me as leaving the Republican party and this he did with infinite personality of language and manner in the very face of my speech to which he was replying, where in positive words I declare that I speak 'for the sake of the Republican party which I hope to save from responsibility for wrongful acts and then in other words, making the whole assumption of the Senator an impossibility I announce, that in speaking for the Republican party it is "because from the beginning I have been the faithful servant of that party and aspire to see it strong and triumphant" In the face of this declared aspiration, in harmony with my whole life the Senator delivered his attack, and assuming to be nothing less than Pope launched against me his bull of excommunication Then again playing Pope he took back his thunder with the apology that others thought so and this alleged understanding of others, he did not hesitate to set above my positive and contemporaneous language that I aspired to see the Republican party strong and triumphant. Then came the Senator from Ohio (Mr Sherman) who taking up his vacation pen added to the articles of impeachment, by a supplementary allegation adopted by the Senator under a misapprehension of facts, Here was another challenge During all this time I have been silent Senators have spoken and then rushed into print but I have said nothing They have had their own way with regard to me It is they who leave me no alternative

It is alleged that I have no personal relations with the President Here the answer is easy I have precisely the relations which he has chosen On reaching Washington in December last I was assured from various quarters that the White House was angry with me and soon after the public journals reported the President as saying to a Senator that if he were not President he would call me to account What he meant I never understood nor would I attribute to him more than he meant but that he used the language reported I have no doubt from information independent of the newspapers I repeat that on this point I have no doubt The same newspapers reported also that a member of the President's household enjoying his peculiar confidence taking great part in the Santo Domingo scheme had menaced me with personal violence I could not believe the story except on positive unequivocal testimony That the menace was made on the condition of his not being an army officer I do not doubt The member of the household when interrogated by my excellent colleague (Mr Wilson) positively denied the menace, but I am assured on authority above question that he has since acknowledged it while the President still retains him in service and sends him to this Chamber

During the last session I have opposed the Presidential policy on an important question but always without one word touching motive or one suggestion of corruption on his part although I never doubted that there were actors in the business who could claim no such immunity It now appears that Fabens who came here as plenipotentiary to press the scheme has concessions to such amount that the diplomatist [illegible] the speculator I always insisted that the President was no party to any such transaction I should do injustice to my own feelings if I did not here declare my regret that I could not agree with the President I tried to think as he did but I could not I listened to the arguments on his side but in vain The adverse considerations multiplied with time and reflection to those who know the motives of my life it is superfluous for me to say that I sought simply the good of my country and Humanity including especially the good of the African race to which our country owes so much

Already there was anger at the White House when the scheme to buy and annex half an island in the Caribbean Sea was pressed upon the Senate in legislative session under the form of appointing a Commission and it became my duty to expose it Here I was constrained to show how at very large expense the usurper Baez was maintained in power by the Navy of the United States, to enable him to sell his country while at the same time the independence of the Black Republic was menaced all of which I was in violation of International Law and of the Constitution of the United States which reserves to Congress the power to declare war What I said was in open debate where the record will speak for me I think I never [illegible] more carefully in my life knowing that the President would take no just exception to it unless he insists upon limiting independence and boldly denies the right of a Senator to express himself freely on great acts of wrong Nor will any Republican Senator admit that the President can impose his own will upon the Republican party Our party is in itself a Republic with universal suffrage and until a measure is adopted by the party no Republican President can make it a party test

Much as I am pained in making this statement with regard to the President infinitely more painful to me is what I must present with regard to the Secretary of State Here again I remark that I am driven to this explanation His strange and unnatural conduct toward me and his prompting of Senators who one after another have set up my

We were sworn as Senators on the same day as far back as 1851 and from that distant time were friends until the Santo Domingo business intervened Nothing could exceed our kindly relations in the past On the evening of the inauguration of Gen Grant as President he was at my house with Mr Motley in friendly communion and all uniting in aspirations for the new Administration Little did Mr Motley or my self imagine in that social hour that one of our little circle was so soon to turn upon us both

Shortly afterward Mr Fish became Secretary of State and began his responsible duties by appealing to me for help I need not say that I had pleasure in responding to his call and that I did what I could most sincerely and conscientiously to aid him Of much from his arrival down to his alienation on the Santo Domingo business, I possess the written record For some time he showed a sympathy with the scheme almost as little as my own But as the President grew in earnestness the Secretary yielded, until finally he became its attorney Repeatedly he came to my house pleading for the scheme Again and again he urged it sometimes at my house and sometimes at his own I was astonished that he could do so and expressed my astonishment with the frankness of old friendship For apology he announced that he was the President's friend, and took office as such But said I you should resign rather than do this thing This I could not refrain from remarking on discovery from dispatches in the State Department that the usurper Baez was maintained in power by our navy This plain act of wrong required instant redress but the Secretary astonished me again by his insensibility to my appeal for justice, He maintained the President as the President maintained Baez I confess that I was troubled

At last some time in June 1870 a few weeks before the Santo Domingo treaty was finally rejected by the Senate the Secretary came to my house about 9 o'clock in the evening and remained till after the clock struck midnight, the whole protracted visit being occupied in earnest and reiterated appeal that I should cease my opposition to the Presidential scheme and here he urged that the election which made Gen Grant President had been carried by him and not by the Republican party so that his desires were entitled to a special attention In this pressure on me he complained that I had opposed other projects of the President In reply to my inquiry he named the repeal of the Tenure of Office Act and the nomination of Mr Jones as Minister to Brussels both of which the President had much at heart, and he concluded with the Santo Domingo treaty I assured the Secretary firmly and simply that seeing the latter as I did with all its surroundings, my duty was plain and that I must continue to oppose it so long as it appeared to me wrong He was not satisfied, and renewed his pressure in various forms returning to the point again and again with persevering assiduity, that would not be arrested when at last finding me inflexible he changed his appeal saying Why not go to London? I offer you the English mission. It is yours Of his authority from the President I know nothing I speak only of what he said My astonishment was heightened by indignation at this too palpable attempt to take me from my post of duty but I suppressed the feeling which rose to the lips and reflecting that he was an old friend and in my own house, answered gently, We have a Minister there who cannot be bettered Thus already did the mission to London begin to pivot on Santo Domingo

I make this revelation only because it is important to a correct understanding of the case, and because the conversation from beginning to end was official in character, relating exclusively to public business without suggestion or allusion of a personal nature and absolutely without the slightest word on my part leading in the most remote degree to any such overture which was unexpected as undesired The offer of the Secretary was in no respect a compliment or kindness but in the strict line of his endeavor to silence my opposition to the Santo Domingo scheme as is too apparent from the facts while it was plain positive and unequivocal, making its object and import beyond question Had it been merely an inquiry, it were bad enough under the circumstances but it was direct and complete as by a plenipotentiary

Shortly afterward, being the day immediately following the rejection of the Santo Domingo treaty Mr Motley was summarily removed according to present pretense, for an offending not only trivial and formal but condoned by time being a year old—very much as Sir Walter Raleigh, after being released from the Tower to conduct a distant expedition as admiral of the fleet was at his return beheaded on a judgment of fifteen years standing The Secretary in conversation and in correspondence with one undertook to explain the removal insisting for a long time that he was the friend of Mr Motley ' but he always made the matter worse while the beats of Santo Domingo entered into the discussion

At last in January 1871, a formal paper justifying the removal and signed by the Secretary was laid before the Senate Glancing at this document I found to my surprise, that its most salient characteristic was constant vindictiveness toward Mr Motley with effort to wound his feelings and this was signed by one who had sat with him at my house in friendly communion and common aspiration on the evening of the inauguration of Gen Grant, and had so often insisted that he was the friend of Mr Motley while as if it was not enough to insult one Massachusetts citizen in the public service the same document after a succession of flings and sneers makes a kind red assault on me and this is signed by one who so constantly called me friend and asked me for help The Senator from Missouri (Mr Schurz) has already directed attention to this assault and has expressed his judgment upon it confessing that he should not have failed to feel the insult and then exclaiming with just indignation when such things are launched against any member of this body it becomes the American Senate to stand by him and not to attempt to disgrace and degrade him because he shows the sensitiveness of a gentleman (Congressional Globe Debate of March 10, 1871) It is easy to see how this Senator regarded the conduct of the Secretary Nor is its true character open to doubt especially when we consider the context and how this full blown personality naturally flowered out of the whole document

Mr Motley in his valedictory to the State Department had alluded to the rumor that he was removed on account of my opposition to the Santo Domingo treaty The document signed by the Secretary while flinging most offensive terms with regard to his friend in London thus turns upon his friend in Washington

It remains for me to notice Mr Motley's adoption of a rumor which had its origin in this city in a more bitterly personally and vindictively hostile to the President

Mr Motley says it has been rumored that he was removed from the post of Minister to England on account of the opposition made by an eminent Senator who honored him with his friendship to the Santo Domingo treaty

Men are [illegible] to attribute the causes of their own failures or their own misfortunes to others than themselves and to claim association or seek a partnership with real or imaginary greatness with which to divide their sorrows or their mistakes There can be no question as to the identity of the eminent Senator at whose door Mr Motley is willing to lay posit the cause of his removal But he is entirely mistaken in seeking a vicarious cause of his loss in confidence and favor and it is unworthy of Mr Motley's real merit and ability and injustice to the venerable Senator alluded to [illegible] to attribute to him any share in the cause of his removal

Mr Motley must know if he does not know it that [illegible] his ignorance of the fact that many Senators opposed the Santo Domingo Treaty [illegible] no man living more tolerant of honest and manly difference [illegible] more single or sincere in his desire for the public welfare is more disinterested or regardless of [illegible] more frank and confiding in his own feelings [illegible]

It is now generally conceded that Tolman cannot possibly be elected Governor of Oregon The ill concealed disappointment of his friends at his ridiculous efforts at campaigning, and the disgust of all who hear him at his narrow quibbles and his broad vulgarity, are conspiring to reduce his strength every day A bad reputation precedes him wherever he goes, and a worse one follows him Had he, imitating the example of La Dow, the Democratic failure, got "wretchedly ill," and remained at home hidden away among his race ponies, instead of attempting to stump the State, he would have added to his chances of election—no, not to his chances of election, for he had none but to his vote Every appearance he makes before the intelligent people of Oregon, counts votes against him If any opinion can be predicated upon such expressions as one hears among the people he meets, and such as he receives in an extensive correspondence, Tolman will be the hindmost man in the Gubernatorial race, by far

Readers of the OREGONIAN are not likely to suppose that we are particularly partial to His Excellency, Governor Grover While endeavoring to keep within the bounds of respectful and respectable criticism, we have not spared his administration. The unnecessary burdens which he and his party friends have imposed upon the people of the State, we have denounced and do still denounce, and the small pettifogging with which he has the habit of attempting to dodge the responsibility of acts that would admit of bold and manly avowal, we have said was, or ought to be, beneath the Governor of a State With these views, and with such a gentleman as T F Campbell running against Grover, we feel extremely desirous and very hopeful of seeing him defeated

But between Grover and Tolman no man ought to hesitate a moment in making his choice. When we inquire, by the light of the recent past which of the two would be likely to squander the people's money on party jobs, we are unable to decide with any reasonable degree of certainty. They would both be the tools of their parties, and the last Legislature furnished abundant proof that the Democrats have no advantage over Republicans in the question of capacity for plundering the Treasury In this respect the choice between Grover and Tolman would be simply a choice between rotten apples But compare the two men in other respects Think of Tolman for the Executive head of the State When another Seward or a Congressional Committee, visit Oregon to inquire into her resources and wants, and go up to the "Executive Mansion" to see and consult with the Governor, how would it do to have them met by such a man as J C Tolman? The proposition is ridiculous, and the thing itself would be a burlesque Tolman may be and probably is, a good neighbor, and a fair citizen. We have no occasion to say he is not But there are very many good neighbors and fair citizens, who are totally unfit to be Governors, and we venture the assertion that every candid man who has heard Tolman speak has decided that he is one of that class. The consolation of hoping that Campbell will be the next Governor is hardly less than that of feeling certain that Tolman will not

ANOTHER DEFENSE OF DR. DAWNE

For a great many years we have enjoyed the privilege of a personal acquaintance with Hon J Quinn Thornton, and a real privilege it has been, for Judge Thornton is a gentleman whose learning and culture are not confined to his profession. He has cultivated polite literature with success. In politics he is a Republican We should therefore be somewhat suprised at his coming out in a letter to the Salem Mercury in defense of Dr Dawne, the Democratic candidate for Superintendent of Public Instruction, against the charge of a lack of scholarly qualifications for the office, did we not know the generous and impulsive character of Judge Thornton's friendships

It will be recollected by our readers that our correspondent, "Timbuctoo," said, in substance, that Dr Dawne is no scholar, and cannot write the English language with an ordinary degree of correctness, and that this being true, the Doctor is, of course, wholly unfit for an office whose duties only educated men can perform It is to this charge that Judge Thornton directs his reply The Judge says that in order to satisfy himself that Dawne is a scholar and can write correct English, he called upon that gentleman and examined "something less than a bushel of his manuscript sermons, which he found to be not only original in thought and manner, but grammatically correct" Being a neighbor of the Doctor's, he comes to his rescue as an act of neighborly kindness, and that injustice may not be done to that gentleman But if the Judge's examination of the Doctor's sermons was made with as great haste and inattention as his defense of the Doctor's scholarship displays, we should hesitate long before accepting his conclusions as a finality We most respectfully, but confidently, appeal from the decision of this question by any one who would consent to the publication, over his own signature, of an article occupying little more space than a half column of the OREGONIAN and containing no less than three palpable grammatical inaccuracies besides other defects of composition We thrust the scissors into the Judge's article almost at random, and on the bits of paper that are clipped out we read, underscoring for ourselves: "I fancy that the descendants of Ham would be slow to regard it as being at all compliment, [illegible] indicated by his nom de guerre,"—the French participial adjective nommé with a wholly different meaning, for the masculine substantive nom, "To believe all this or even any part of it is asking more than any stomach will bear." To believe is not asking under any circumstances, and without intending to raise any question of veracity with Dr Dawne's defender we protest that it appears scarcely probable that a stomach that could receive that sentence of the Judge's with impunity would retch at anything

We have not the slightest prejudice against Dr Dawne, and do not wish to be unjust to him and as for Judge Thornton we should not dare to criticise any literary effort of his that did not plainly appear to have been hurriedly and carelessly penned This is manifestly the case with his defense of Dawne's scholarship which must prove an unfortunate venture for both himself and his friend.

THE SICK MAN

A week ago it was announced that LaDow would speak at Salem on the 14th instant. He did not speak at Salem or anywhere else on the 14th instant, and will not on any other instant The announcement was probably made upon the supposition that as Davenport and Williams would be at Pendleton LaDow's home, about that date, LaDow would not be too "wretchedly ill" to run away and it was morally certain that if he ran he would seek the protection of the Democratic ring at Salem LaDow speak at Salem! why, he has not spoken above his breath since the Albany Convention In fact he is "wretchedly ill" The idea of making LaDow—"wretchedly ill" as he is constitutionally,—the successor of Col. Nesmith! What would LaDow do for Oregon, if through any freak of malicious fortune he should be elected to Congress? Why he is the shabbiest possible nonentity at home, and surely he would be nothing at Washington But his nomination was a party necessity, or rather a necessity to the plans of the Democratic party managers. Nesmith must be destroyed because the chief manipulator wanted to go to the Senate after a while, and his chances would be but slim with a rival such as Nesmith in the field. Nesmith must be killed off because he is a man of talent and power, and LaDow must be created out of common dead clay, because he could never have either And what of the party? The party? Why, who are the party if not these manipulators? But the people, what of them? "Oh they have no interest in the question They ought to be satisfied with paying the taxes and electing the party tickets"

Now, what possible interest could the Democratic masses of Oregon have in the election of LaDow? We ask this question in the most serious candor. He accepts the nomination of their Convention without so much as the single grunt of gratitude or appreciation that a swine would give for its swill, and then he lies down "wretchedly ill" with an ague that manifests itself nowhere save in his knees, and waits in stolid indifference for them to elect him Elect him! They ought to bury him instead If nobody's rights except LaDow's were involved in the transaction, the trading him off to elect Dick Williams, which is being pushed all over the State, would be no wrong

GOOD OUT OF EVIL

Still the coalition between the managers of the two parties is being pressed, and still the people who have heretofore trusted the professions of these managers, are turning away from them in disgust After so many exhortations and threats, to keep the people from breaking ranks and acting independently of party, after so much and so loud denunciations by the political managers of all co-operation amongst persons of opposite political parties, after such labored arguments and such earnest appeals as these managers have been making for the maintaining of party lines,—after all these things, they can not go into the embraces of each other with such warmth of affection as is exhibited in their hermaphrodite conventions in tickets in several counties in the State, without opening the eyes of the masses to their hypocrisy Their self stultification is seen at once by those whose votes they are trading upon, and the whole corrupt transaction is meeting that disapprobation among the honest masses that is destined to end in the repudiation of the entire crowd of trading knaves at the polls Wherever this fraud has been attempted, as in Douglas, Washington, &c, the strength of the Independent movement has been increased by it And, such will be its result wherever it may be tried. The people who compose both parties are sincere in their convictions, honest in their purposes and candid in their declarations and whenever as in this coalition, their self appointed leaders show themselves selfish, dishonest and false, those leaders will be repudiated. This conspiracy to defraud free men and barter them off like cattle, is but aiding and hastening that total emancipation of the people from party thralldom which it was designed to prevent

WHO HAS LIED LET THE PEOPLE ANSWER

The Bulletin renews with increased vehemence its denial that Richard Williams the Republican candidate for Congress was ever an applicant for swamp lands It abuses Governor Grover for peddling about the State the miserable falsehood &c We propose to summarize the evidence in the case, and submit the question of truthfulness to the candid reader. We will quote again from the Bulletin of the 9th inst, Mr Williams denial of the allegation

> That editor [of the F[illegible]] propounded some questions to him and said [illegible] a subscriber for some swamp land! He never told a bigger lie in his life

Here is the evidence as it has already appeared in the OREGONIAN

A Salem correspondent writes that when Mr Williams was at Salem one week ago last Sunday, he made this same denial Thereupon he was challenged to go to the State House and consult the record Thinking, perhaps, that because it was the Sabbath the departments would be closed, Mr Williams consented to go It happened that the Clerk of the Board of Land Commissioners was willing to produce the records and then and there Richard Williams was confronted with his application for 100 000 acres of swamp lands He did not attempt to question the record

In order to satisfy ourselves beyond a reasonable doubt, we addressed a second note to a prominent citizen of Salem, requesting him to call on the Clerk of the Board and make a personal inspection of the record In answer thereto we received the following note, which was published in the OREGONIAN of Tuesday

> Dear Sir—Pursuant to your request I called at the Secretary of State's office and examined the files of the office and there found an application with Richard Williams name attached thereto with eight others applying for 900 000 acres of swamp land filed in said office on the 25[illegible] of February 18[illegible] M

3 We have before us a pamphlet entitled "Communication from the Governor in answer to S J R No 10 Giving Information on the Subject of Swamp Lands" This communication was sent to the Legislature at its seventh regular session, and bears the imprint of Eugene Semple State Printer We presume the document will be allowed in evidence On Page 11 of this pamphlet, under the head of "Swamp Land Applications" we find these names occurring together

	Acres
W W Thayer	100,000
Richard Williams	100,000

Messrs Thayer and Williams are law partners in this city, and the names appear together on the record, the names of several other prominent citizens of Portland following immediately after With this evidence before him, can any reasonable man doubt that Richard Williams Republican candidate for Congress is, or was an applicant for 100,000 acres of swamp land? Anticipating this record evidence, perhaps, the Bulletin says

> Now it is not denied that the name of one Richard Williams appears on the Swamp Land books in Salem as an applicant for lands But it is not the application of the Richard Williams who is running for Congress on the Republican ticket

How then, we ask, happens this remarkable conjunction of the names of Thayer and Williams? And furthermore, if this Richard Williams on "the Swamp Land books in Salem" is not "the Richard Williams who is running for Congress on the Republican ticket," then what Richard Williams is it? And why did not the Republican candidate, when he was confronted with the record, state that the applicant whose name appears on the books of the Clerk was not himself but another Richard Williams? Here was his opportunity? Why didn't he take advantage of it and disown the transaction then and there The testimony in the case is all against the Republican candidate And now the onus probandi is shifted from the accuser to the accused How will he bear the burden? If indeed, there are two Richard Williamses in the State of Oregon (and we presume there are more than one) it is time it were known in order that if when the votes are counted on the 1st day of June, a plurality thereof shall be found for "Richard Williams" the real and the mythical Richard may divide the $2,000, and agree on the number of days each shall serve under Senator Hipple.

We have devoted thus much of our space to this matter, only because the Republican candidate for Congress is accusing Mr Davenport and the Independent press of falsification The decent people of all parties may regret that Mr Williams has involved himself in a scrape, from which he can extricate himself only by confessing that he has uttered a falsehood, but they can not apologize for, or in any way condone a deliberate lie The Republican candidate may search the State from Ashland to La Grande, and he may not find another Richard Williams who subscribed for 100,000 acres of swamp land with Walter W Thayer. We have established his personal identity beyond all controversy, and

"Richard's himself again!

SCOTCH CAPITAL FOR OREGON

We have received from Hon William Reid, formerly United States Vice Consul at Dundee, a copy of the prospectus of "The Oregon Shipping Company of Scotland," which we propose to publish at the earliest opportunity Our crowded columns will not admit of its publication this morning

The Oregon Shipping Company of Scotland is one of those enterprises started by Mr Reid a Scotch gentleman to whom our readers have already been introduced, and who although he has never seen our State, is a devoted friend of Oregon He is an indefatigable worker, and it is to his energy and enterprise, more than to the exertions of any other individual, that we are indebted for all that has been accomplished in our behalf in Scotland He is now on his way to Oregon By a private note we learn that he expects to arrive in Portland about the 22d inst In whatever capacity he might come he would be warmly welcomed as a genuine zealous friend But his visit derives additional importance from the fact that he comes as the representative of $5 000,000 of Scotch capital owned by prominent gentlemen in Dundee Mr Reid is instructed to consider all financial or public undertakings, such as county or township loans, bridges roads school bonds State loans and the like, as he informs us in the note above alluded to Mr Reid has now by his own efforts successfully promoted the Oregon and Washington Trust Investment Company Limited and the Oregon Shipping Company of Scotland For this we all are thankful If he will send us a thousand Scotch families skilled laborers (as we expect him to do) we will have still greater occasion to advertise him as a benefactor of the State Oregon needs capital but she needs muscle as well

The capture of Tiburcio Vasquez the notorious bandit of Southern California will afford immense relief to the good people of that section Just before his capture Governor Booth increased the reward offered for his body to $8 000 if taken alive and $[illegible] if brought in dead

The N Y [illegible] of May 21 says Mr Cyrus W Field starts for California next week with Canon Kingsley and his daughter Early in June he will sail for Iceland to attend the millennial celebration

SATURDAY MORNING MAY 16

CHANGE OF PASTOR—The numerous friends of Rev A K Medbury pastor of the Baptist Church and especially the members of his flock will learn with sincere regret that he will soon take his departure from our State to reside permanently elsewhere Some weeks ago Mr Medbury received a very cogent call from the Trustees of the Baptist Church at Milwaukee Wisconsin tendering him the pastorate of the Church at that place and urgently desiring his acceptance After due consideration he has signified his acceptance of the call and will take his departure about the first of August However Mr Medbury will not depart until his successor shall have arrived so as to prevent leaving the Church here without a pastor His successor will be the Rev D J Pierce This gentleman is noted for generous literary culture and scholarly attainments He is a graduate of New Hampton College Vermont and also of Newton Theological Seminary Mass He has resided for the past four years in Laramie Wyoming Mr and Mrs Pierce founded the Laramie College a flourishing institution of learning several years ago which they have conducted very successfully Mr Pierce has also established a Church at Laramie and several others in various portions of Wyoming As soon as the necessary arrangements can be effected the new pastor will be on his way to Portland accompanied by his accomplished and estimable wife

UNION TEMPERANCE MEETING—The meeting last evening was largely attended and during the first part a great number of selections and news items were read by the ladies Mrs Thompson read a good one from Mark Twain on Reconstructed Saloonists and Lis "Op[illegible] on of the Crusaders" which was very enjoyable. Mrs Quackenbush spoke of her experiences among the saloons and a touching incident concerning a strange lady who greeted them on one occasion—and felt it to be her duty to continue in the course she had begun Immediately Dora McCord of Seattle was introduced by Mrs Duniway and recited in a very elegant manner The Modern Ca[illegible] which from her young lips made an impression that will not soon be forgotten by all who heard it One of the ladies had visited the Jail but said that they found no one there and remarked that it was an occurrence seldom known here They again said he [illegible] for the inside of two or three saloons, and some drinking—but no money going over the bars The ladies will have a hearing again next Tuesday night, when all advocates of the cause of temperance are expected to be present

DISAPPEARED—The evening contemporary says Some time yesterday the Sheriff of this county executed a writ upon the property of one John Eisenhauer doing business in East Portland and closed the store which seemed to excite the proprietor very much Towards evening he draped the doors of his store and residence with crape and in with five twenty five cent pieces from his pocket he remarked that that was all he had to show for [illegible] years hard labor and that he had draped the premises because there was sure to be a funeral in the morning Since that time he has not been seen although search has been made for him and some of his friends were so well satisfied that he had taken his life that they commenced dragging the river for his remains but without avail Eisenhauer has been drinking very freely of late, and we understand his wife left him some weeks since on that account and it's probable that these two difficulties combined have rendered him ill at ease with himself and induced him to take his life

MONEY RAISED—From the sum of money which was forwarded to Washington on [illegible] day to Col Chapman to aid him in securing the passage of the P D & S L R R bill now pending before Congress it would seem that our citizens have responded handsomely the several committees appointed last Saturday evening to wait on them to solicit contributions Mr J H Fisk the Chairman of the railroad meeting forwarded a telegraphic transfer yesterday to Col Chapman of [illegible] 057 50 which sum was raised within the last few days by the committee In the [illegible] Ward there was subscribed $1 00[illegible] of which only $630 was paid over We are requested to state that the balance subscribed can be handed in at any time to Mr Fisk or to the committee appointed to canvass that portion of the city Immediately on its receipt the money will be forwarded to Washington

A LADY MINISTER [illegible] reference to special church notices it will be seen that a lady the pastor of an [illegible] church will officiate in the pulpit of the Unitarian Church to-morrow morning Mrs [illegible] an honored worker in the denomination she represents She is visiting the coast for a short period, and during her stay it is hoped will give the people of our State and adjoining Territories an opportunity of hearing her both as a minister and a lecturer

TEMPERANCE MEETING—The union temperance services for to-morrow (Sabbath) evening will be held in the Taylor street M E Church The exercises will consist of prayer praise, and platform addresses The public are cordially invited to be present Every lover of temperance lend presence and influence to the success of these services which are so important to success in the present campaign against intemperance in this city

ARRESTED FOR ADULTERY.

Particulars of a case of adultery and arrest of the offending party have just reached us which are substantially as follows

Near Hubbard Station lives an old well to do farmer named Geo G Coffin Many years ago he lost his wife and soon after married again His second wife was a widow and at the time of her marriage with Coffin had a daughter quite tender in years For several years past a remarkable and very noticeable degree of intimacy has existed between Coffin and his step daughter They were observed to be inseparable companions—scarcely ever seen apart, Both appeared very fond of each other and in all their deportment manifested a constant preference for each other's society and a degree of affection scarcely proper under the circumstances. These very unusual relations between the parties were often observed and elicited considerable comment among the friends and neighbors who resided in the vicinity Suspicions that all was not right were at length aroused and finally it became a settled conviction in the mind of the community that improper and criminal intimacy existed between the step father and daughter Nothing, however of a tangible character was developed and consequently no legal steps were taken Every person was well satisfied that the parties were guilty but still nothing positive could be established Thus matters existed until several months ago, when the step daughter became engaged to a school teacher whose name we are unable to give at present which culminated in the marriage of the parties Whether or not the young man had heard the rumors concerning the peculiar relations which existed between Coffin and his step daughter prior to his marriage we are unable to state Soon after the marriage the young wife, confessed to her husband that criminal intimacy had existed between her and the step father for several years past She also stated that Coffin had since her marriage made attempts to violate her person under threats of murder The degree of mortification and indignation which these astounding revelations aroused in the mind of the young husband may be better imagined than described, Application for a warrant of arrest was made at the office of the nearest magistrate charging Coffin with the crime of incest But it seems that the guilty party obtained wind of the proceedings and left that part of the country bending his steps towards Portland

On Thursday morning the injured outraged husband arrived in this city in pursuit of the fugitive armed with a warrant Reporting himself to Chief Lappeus he exhibited his warrant and relating the circumstances of the case was introduced to Judge Denny who endorsed the warrant Information was obtained in the meantime that Coffin had left Portland and was at Vancouver Lappeus advised the husband to go quietly over and get the warrant endorsed there and then, if he could get Coffin to come on board the steamer of his own accord he could make the arrest. The young man went over, but instead of following the instructions of the Chief he immediately arrested Coffin and gave him into the hands of the Sheriff of Clarke county Having done that he was unable to obtain his prisoner as the Sheriff very properly refused to surrender Coffin up Yesterday the husband returned to Portland. Acting upon the advice given him he proceeded to Salem on the evening train to procure a requisition from Governor Grover To-day he will return and proceed to Olympia without delay He will deposit his requisition in Governor Ferry's office and obtain another authorizing him to take the prisoner beyond the Territorial limits

Coffin is reported to be about fifty years of age His second wife is still living It seems scarcely possible that criminal relations could be so long maintained between her daughter and husband without her knowledge The recent startling disclosure concerning the social crime of Coffin although only confirmatory of suspicions long entertained, has thrown the community where he resides into a state of great excitement and much indignation is justly felt and expressed over the disgusting and scandalous affair

A few nights ago the house of a gentleman who resides in the lower portion of the city was entered and several articles purloined The thieves had confined their depredations exclusively to the kitchen, and contented themselves with carrying away everything of an edible character they could lay digits on Supposing the thieves were Chinamen, or some half starved drunken vagrant the gentleman gave himself but little concern about the loss of a few cold viands Judge of his surprise on inspecting the back yard next morning to discover a number of small tracks evidently made by boys not more than 12 or 15 years old In going to and from the house the juvenile thieves were obliged to cross some soft earth and thus left unmistakable evidences of their guilt

Several evenings ago a lady who had been out marketing took occasion to call for a few minutes at the house of a friend on her way home Just as she entered the front door of the house she deposited her basket filled with meat and groceries on the stoop After conversing for a short time with her friend the lady started home When she looked for her basket she found it "came up missing" She was inclined to think for a time that some one had tried to play a joke on her but to this day neither basket nor contents has greeted her vision During all the time she remained the front door was standing wide open and both ladies were chatting and laughing in the parlor Two or three young hoodlums were standing on the sidewalk near by and observed the lady place the basket on the porch That being the case, it became no difficult matter to correctly surmise who were the guilty parties

But the boldest piece of thievery of which we have yet heard was perpetrated yesterday afternoon at the residence of Governor Gibbs A beautiful and highly prized canary was hung up in its cage on the front porch to enable the little warbler an opportunity of enjoying for a few hours the bright sunshine About two o clock Mrs. Gibbs, having observed that the bird was silent for some time, came to the door Her surprise and chagrin can be imagined when she discovered both bird and cage gone Soon after missing the canary her father who lives on an adjoining block came in and informed her that only a short time before a boy called at his house with a bird and cage and endeavored to sell both to him at a very low price He did not recognize the canary but thought it a little singular that such a small urchin should come in possession of a canary On declining to purchase the bird the boy started off towards the business portion of the city where he probably soon found some one to buy the canary The police we learn are ferreting out the matter and the little thief will have to cover up his tracks in a cunning manner or he will find himself in the meshes of the law soon Recently we have heard of numerous instances of youthful depravity in keeping with those related above The solution of the problem What shall be done with the hoodlum element" is only a question of time It is one of the growing evils which shall in the near future attract public consideration and demand an adequate remedy

For a few days past Mr O S Phelps has been soliciting the signatures of the legal voters of School District No 1 to a petition asking the Directors to cut off the southern portion of the District, thus making the confines of the city the boundaries of the District That portion of the District proposed to be cut off has cost the taxpayers about $1 400 per annum, since the school house was built and as the people of that section are well able to support a school of their own it is proper they should be compelled to do so

A poor editor who knows how it is says You can arrest a man for libel and pay costs too if you choose but you cannot imprison him for boring you It is a crime for a man to steal your pocket book even if it is trash but he may steal out of your working day three hours worth perhaps ten dollars in money and double that in discipline with perfect impunity It is called murder for one man to destroy another's life but when South drops in and kills the choicest hours of day, throttling your best ideas and throws your whole train of thought off the track there is nothing to be done save that he just thought he'd run in a moment and sit awhile and have a friendly chat No penalty in law no fine no imprisonment no gallows All the editorial fraternity heartily endorse the above It is sad but true

FAIR AND FESTIVAL

The fair and festival given yesterday afternoon and also last evening at Good Templar Hall by the Children's Guild of Trinity Parish was a very successful and pleasant affair The Hall was opened at 3 o clock P M and also again at 7 o clock There were a number of tables ladened with refreshments and numerous articles of fancy needle work etc presided over by the young misses which were well patronized The attendance was large and the receipts we should judge were very substantial

I saw upon the crowded street
A dark and sweeping throng
Walking running and jostling,
And pushing each other along
Where are these people going
I asked of an aged man
And he spake with the air of a prophet,
To drink from Hart's fountain

I walked along the avenue
Till I came to the beautiful store
Where the people were surging inward
As the back ones pushed those before.
And the crowd kept growing larger
Like Egypt's great caravan
And a sign at the door bade me enter —
It said Here is Hart's Fountain

words and assurances of friendship to cover a secret and determined purpose of hostility (Senate Executive Document No 11 pp 36 37 XLIst Congress Third Session)

The eulogy of the President here is at least singular, when it is considered that every dispatch of the Secretary of State is by order of the President but it is evident that the writer of the dispatch had made up his mind to set all rule at defiance If beyond paying court to the President even at the expense of making him praise himself the concluding sentence of this elaborate passage, so full of gall from beginning to end, had any object if it were anything but a mountain of words it was an open attempt to make an official document the vehicle of insult to me and this personal insult was signed "Hamilton Fish" As I became aware of it and found also that it was regarded by others in the same light I was distressed and perplexed I could not comprehend it I knew not why the Secretary could step so far out of his way in a paper absolutely without precedent to treat me with ostentatious indignity especially when I thought that for years I had been his friend that I had never spoken of him except with kindness and that constantly since assuming his present duties he had turned to me for help This was more incomprehensible [illegible] how utterly void in vain were all his imputations I had to rebound if such an attempt on me can on its author

Not lightly would I [illegible] an ancient friend For a time I said nothing to anybody of the outrage, hoping that perhaps the Secretary would open his eyes as to the true character of the document he had signed and volunteer some friendly explanation Meanwhile a proposition to resume negotiations was received from England and the Secretary it seems desired to confer with me on the subject, but there was evident consciousness on his part that he had done wrong, for instead of coming to me at once, he sent for Mr Patterson of the Senate, and telling him that he wished to confer with me, added that he did not know precisely what were his relations with me and how I should receive him Within a brief fortnight I had been in conference with him at the State Department and had dined at his house, beside about the same time making a call there Yet he was in doubt about his relations with me Plainly because since the conference, the dinner, and the call, the document signed by him had been communicated to the Senate and the conscience-struck Secretary did not know how I should take it Mr Patterson asked me what he should report I replied, that should the Secretary come to my house he would be received as an old friend and that at any time I should be at his service for consultation on public business, but that I could not conceal my deep sense of personal wrong received from him absolutely without reason or excuse That this message was communicated by Mr Patterson I cannot doubt, for the Secretary came to my house and there was a free conference How frankly I spoke on public questions without one word on other things, the Secretary knows He will remember if any inquiry, remark or allusion escaped from me except in reference to public business The interview was of business and nothing else.

On careful reflection it seemed to me plain that, while meeting the Secretary officially, it would not be consistent with self respect for me to continue personal relations with one who had put his name to a document, which, after protracted fury toward another, contained a studied insult to me where the fury is intensified rather than tempered by too obvious premeditation Public business must not suffer but in such a case personal relations naturally cease, and this rule I have followed since Is there any Senator who would have done more? I am at a loss to understand how the Secretary could expect anything beyond those official relations which I declared my readiness at all times to maintain, and which even after his assault on me, he was willing to seek at my own house. To expect more shows on his part grevious insensibility to the thing he had done. Whatever one signs he makes his own, and the Secretary when he signed this document adopted a libel upon his friend, and when he communicated it to the Senate he published the libel Nothing like it can be shown in the history of our Government It stands alone. The Secretary is alone. Like Jean Paul in German literature his just title will be "the only one" For years I have known Secretaries of State and I often differed from them, but never before did I receive from one anything but kindness Never before did a Secretary of a State sign a document libeling an associate in the public service and publish it to the world Never before did a Secretary of State so entirely set at defiance every sentiment of friendship It is impossible to explain this strange aberration except from the disturbing influence of Santo Domingo But whatever its origin, its true character is beyond question

As nothing like this State paper can be shown in the history of our Government so nothing like it can be shown, in the history of other governments. Not an instance can be named in any country where a person in a corresponding official position has done such a thing The American Secretary is alone not only in his own country, but in all countries none but himself can be his parallel Seneca in the Hercules Furens has pictured him

"Quæris Alcidæ parem?
Nemo est nisi ipse"

He is originator and first inventor with all prerogatives and responsibilities thereto belonging I have mentioned only one sally in this official document but the whole, besides its prevailing offensiveness shows inconsistency with actual facts of my own knowledge, which is in entire harmony with the recklessness towards me and attests the same spirit throughout Thus we have the positive allegation that the death of Lord Clarendon, June 27, determined the time for inviting Mr Motley to make place for a successor when in fact some time before his lordship s death the Secretary had invited me to go to London as Mr Motley's successor—thus showing that the explanation of Lord Clarendon's death was an after-thought when it became important to divert attention from the obvious dependence of the removal upon the defeat of the Santo Domingo treaty

A kindred inconsistency arrested the attention of the London Times in its article of January 24, 1871 on the document signed by the Secretary Here according to this journal, the document supplied the means of correction since it set forth that on the 25th of June, two days before Lord Clarendon s death Mr Motley s coming removal was announced in a London journal After stating the alleged dependence of the removal upon the death of Lord Clarendon the journal, holding the same remarks, And yet there is at least one circumstance appearing, strange to say, in Mr Fish s own dispatch which is not quite consistent with the explanation he sets up of Mr Motley s recall Then, after quoting from the document, and mentioning that "its own correspondent at Philadelphia did on the 25th of June send us a message that Mr Motley was about to be withdrawn,' the journal mildly concludes that "as this was two days before Lord Clarendon's death, which was unforeseen here and could not have been expected in the States it is difficult to connect the resolution to supersede the late American Minister with the change at our Foreign Office The difficulty of the Times is increased by the earlier incident with regard to myself

Not content with making the removal depend upon the death of Lord Clarendon when it was heralded abroad, not only before the death of this minister had occurred but while it was yet unforeseen, the document seeks to antedate the defeat of the Santo Domingo treaty, so as to interpose 'weeks and months' between the latter event and the removal The language is explicit "The treaty,' says the document, "was admitted to be practically dead and was only wanting the formal action of the Senate for weeks and months before the decease of the illustrious statesman of Great Britain Weeks and months! And yet during the last month, when the treaty "was admitted to be practically dead" the Secretary who signed the document passed three hours at my house pleading with me to withdraw my opposition and finally wound up by the tender to me of the English mission with no other apparent object than simply to get me out of the way

Then again we have the positive allegation that the President embraced an opportunity "to prevent any further misapprehensions of his views through Mr Motley by taking from him the right to discuss further the Alabama claims, whereas the Secretary in a letter to me at Boston dated at Washington Oct [illegible] 1869 informs me that the discussion of the question was withdrawn from London, because (the italics are the Secretary s) we think that when renewed it can be carried on here with a better prospect of settlement than where the late attempt at a convention which resulted so disastrously and was conducted so strangely was had" and what the Secretary thus wrote he repeated in conversation when we met, carefully making the transfer to Washington depend upon our advantage here, from the presence of the Senate—thus showing that the pretext put forth to wound Mr Motley was an afterthought

Still further the document signed by the Secretary alleges by way of excuse for removing Mr Motley, the important public consideration of having a representative in sympathy with the President s views whereas when the Secretary tendered the mission to me no allusion was made to sympathy with the President s views while Mr Motley it appears, was charged with agreeing too much with me—all of which shows how little this matter had to do with the removal and how much the Santo Domingo business at the time was above any question of conformity on other things.

In the amiable passage already quoted there is a parenthesis which breathes the [illegible] spirit by way of aspersion [illegible] Mr Motley and myself the country [illegible] informed that he was indebted for [illegible] nomination to influence and urgency on my part Of the influence I know nothing, but I deny positively any urgency I spoke with the President on this subject once casually on the stairs of the executive mansion and then again in a formal interview And here since the effort of the Secretary I shall frankly state what I said and how it was introduced I began by remarking that with the permission of the President I should venture to suggest the expediency of continuing Mr Marsh in Italy, Mr Morris at Constantinople and Mr Bancroft at Berlin, as all these exerted a peculiar influence and did honor to our country To this list I proposed to add Dr Howe of Greece believing that he too, would do honor to our country and also Mr Motley in London, who I suggested, would have an influence there beyond his official position The President said that nobody should be sent to London who was not 'right' on the claims question and he kindly explained to me what he meant by 'right' From this time I had no conversation with him about Mr Motley until after the latter had left for his post, when the President volunteered to express his great satisfaction in the appointment Such was the extent of my "urgency" nor was I much in advance of the Secretary at that time for he showed me what was called the "brief" at the State Department for the English mission with Mr Motley's name at the head of the list

Other allusions to myself would be cheerfully forgotten if they were not made the pretext to assail Mr Motley who is held to severe account for supposed dependence on me If this were crime not the Minister but the Secretary should suffer for it is the Secretary and not the Minister who appealed to me constantly for help, often desiring me to think for him or to hold the pen for him Other things the Secretary also forgot He forgot the blow he dealt, whether at Mr Motley or myself, rudely tore the vail from the past so far as its testimony might be needed in elucidation of the truth that the document he signed was a challenge and provocation to meet him on the facts without reserve or concealment that the wantonness of assault on Mr Motley was so closely associated with that on me that any explanation that I might make must be a defense of him that even if duty to the Senate and myself did not require this explanation, there are other duties not to be disregarded, among which is duty to the absent, who cannot be permitted to suffer unjustly—duty to a much injured citizen of Massachusetts, who may properly look to a Senator of his State for protection against official wrong—duty also to a public servant insulted beyond precedent who beside writing and speaking most effectively for the Republican party and for this Administration has added to the renown of our country by unsurpassed success in literature commending him to the gratitude and good will of all! These things the Secretary strangely forgot when he dealt the blow which tore the vail

The crime of the Minister was dependence on me So says the State paper A simple narrative will show who is the criminal My early relations with the Secretary have already appeared, and how he began by asking me for help, practising constantly on this appeal A few details will be enough At once on his arrival to assume his new duties he asked my counsel about appointing Mr Bancroft Davis Assistant Secretary of State and I advised the appointment without sufficient knowledge I am inclined to believe now Then followed the questions with Spain growing out of Cuba which were the subject of constant conference where he sought me repeatedly and kindly listened to my opinions Then came the instructions for the English mission known as the dispatch of May 15 1869 At each stage of these instructions I was in the counsels of the Secretary Following my suggestion he authorized me to invite Mr Motley in his name to prepare the "memoir" or essay on our claims which, notwithstanding its entirely confidential character, he drags before the world for purpose of assault, in a manner clearly unjustifiable Then as the dispatch was preparing he asked my help especially in that part relating to the concession of belligerent rights I have here the first draft of this important passage in pencil and in my own handwriting varying in no essential respect from that adopted Here will be found the distinction on which I have always insisted that while other Powers conceded belligerent rights to our rebels, it was in England only that the concession was supplemented by acts causing direct damage to the United States Not long afterward in August 1869 when the British storm had subsided, I advised that the discussion should be renewed by an elaborate communication setting forth our case in length and breadth but without any estimate of damages throwing upon England the opportunity if not the duty of making some practical proposition Adopting this recommendation, the Secretary invited me to write the dispatch I thought it better that it should be done by another and I named for this purpose an accomplished gentleman, whom I knew to be familiar with the question, and he wrote the dispatch This paper, bearing date September 25 1869, is unquestionably the ablest in the history of the present Administration unless we except the last dispatch of Mr Motley

In a letter dated at Washington, Oct 15 1869, and addressed to me at Boston the Secretary describes this paper in the following terms: "The dispatch to Motley (which I learn by a telegram from him has been received) is a calm, full review of our entire case making no demand no valuation of damages but I believe covering all the ground and all the points that have been made on our side I hope that it will meet your views I think it will It leaves the question with Great Britain to determine when any negotiations are to be renewed" The Secretary was right in his description It was "a full review of our whole case" covering all the ground and all the points and it did meet my views, as the Secretary thought it would especially where it arraigned so strongly that fatal concession of belligerent rights on the ocean, which in any faithful presentment of the national cause will always be the first stage of evidence, since without this precipitate and voluntary act, the common law of England was a positive protection against the equipment of a corsair ship, or even the supply of a blockade runner for unacknowledged rebels The conformity of this dispatch with my views was recognized by others besides the Secretary It is well known that Lord Clarendon did not hesitate in familiar conversation to speak of it as Mr Sumner's speech over again while another English personage said that it out Sumnered Sumner And yet with his name signed to this dispatch written at my suggestion and in entire conformity with my view as admitted by him and recognized by the English Government the Secretary taunts Mr Motley for supposed harmony with me on this very question This taunt is all more unnatural when it is known that this dispatch is in similar conformity with the memoir of Mr Motley and was evidently written with knowledge of that admirable document where the case of our country is stated with perfect mastery But the story does not end here

On the communication of this dispatch to the British Government Mr Thornton was instructed to ascertain what would be accepted by our Government, when the Secretary under date of Washington November 6th 1869 reported to me this application and then after expressing unwillingness to act on it until he "could have an opportunity of consulting me," he wrote, "When will you be here? Will you either note what you think will be sufficient to meet the views of the Senate and of the country, or will you formulate such proposition?" After this responsible commission, the letter winds up with the earnest request "Let me hear from you as soon as you can (the italics are the Secretary's) and I should like to confer with you at the earliest convenient time" On my arrival at Washington the Secretary came to my house at once and we conferred freely Santo Domingo had not yet sent its shadow into his soul

It is easily seen that there was constant and reiterated appeal to me especially on our negotiations with England and yet in the face of this testimony where he is the unimpeachable witness the Secretary is pleased to make Mr Motley s supposed relations with me the occasion for insult to him, while as if this were not enough, he crowns his work with a personal assault on me—all of which whether as regards Mr Motley or me is beyond comprehension

How little Mr Motley merited anything but respect and courtesy from the Secretary is attested by all who know his eminent position in London, and the service he rendered to his country Already the London press usually slow to praise Americans when strenuous for their country has furnished its voluntary testimony The Daily News of August 16 1870 speaks of the insulted minister in these terms

"We are violating no confidence in saying that all the hopes of Mr Motley [illegible] have been amply fulfilled and that the announcement of his unexpected and unexplained recall was received with extreme astonishment [illegible] wonderfully facilitated by the frankness and [illegible] that has presided over the conduct of American affairs in this country during [illegible]"

The London press had not the key to this extraordinary transaction It knew not the potency of the Santo Domingo spell nor its strange influence over the Secretary even breeding insensibility to instinctive amenities and awakening peculiar unfriendliness to Mr Motley so amply certified afterward in an official document under his own hand—all of which burst forth with more than the tropical luxuriance of the much coveted island

I cannot disguise the sorrow with which I offer this explanation In self-defense and for the sake of truth do I now speak I have cultivated forbearance and hoped from the bottom of my heart that I might do so to the end But beyond the call of the public press has been the defiant challenge of Senators and also the consideration sometimes presented by friends that my silence might be misinterpreted Tardily and most reluctantly I make this record believing it more a duty to the Senate than to myself but a plain duty to be performed in all simplicity without reserve Having nothing to conceal and willing always to be judged by the truth I court the fullest inquiry and shrink from no conclusion founded on an accurate knowledge of the case

If this narration enables any one to see in clearer light the injustice done to Mr Motley then I have performed a further duty too long postponed nor will it be doubted by any honest nature that since the assault of the Secretary he was entitled to that vindication which is found in a statement of facts within my own knowledge Anything short of this would be a license to the Secretary in his new style of State paper which, for the sake of the public service and of good will among men must be required to stand alone in the isolation which becomes its abnormal character Plainly without precedent in the past it must be without chance of repetition in the future

Here I stop My present duty is performed when I set forth the simple facts, exhibiting those personal relations which have been drawn in question without touching the questions of principle behind

[illegible] until the greenback circulation reaches $300 000 000 While there is much in the plan to commend it it does not seem to meet the wishes of the inflationist

An exchange standing on the platform of free banking on a specie basis says The greenbacks should be gradually retired the National Banks should be required to gradually accumulate specie until it reaches an amount equal to at least [illegible] per cent of their circulation and then resumption will be comparatively an easy thing It is both right and proper that our national interest bearing bonds should be made the banking capital of the country A paper currency will probably always be used in this country but it should be based on specie for its value and be redeemable always in coin on demand The trouble now is not that we have a paper currency but that that currency is irredeemable and that by the Legal Tender act we have abolished Gold as a standard of value Congress can now in the light of the veto message retrace the wild step it took and adopt some bill which shall look toward the retirement of the greenbacks the substitution of National Bank notes redeemable in coin on demand and the reintroduction of Gold as a standard of value Once there let the nation never again depart from it.

Grain Reports

Chicago elevators at the commencement of business April 27th contained 6 491 [illegible] bushels of grain embracing 5 304 540 bushels of wheat [illegible] bushels of corn 643 550 bushels of oats 2 [illegible] bushels of rye and [illegible] bushels of barley against [illegible] bushels one week before and [illegible] at the same period last year

Milwaukee warehouses at the close of business on April [illegible] contained [illegible] bushels of wheat [illegible] bushels corn [illegible] bushels of oats [illegible] bushels of rye and [illegible] bushels of barley

New York warehouses contained May 1st [illegible] bushels of wheat 110,000 bushels of corn 135 000 bushels of oats [illegible] bushels of rye 110 000 bushels of barley and 11 000 bushels of malt

The visible supply of grain in the United States and Canada April 18 was Wheat 10 416 6[illegible] bushels corn 6 313 216 bushels oats 2 445 835 bushels barley 311 [illegible] bushels.

The wheat in transit for the United Kingdom on April 5 1874 aggregated [illegible] bushels. The average amount in transit each week from Jan 10 1874 to April 5 inclusive was 10 876 156 bushels, and the reported amount in transit at the latter mentioned date shows an apparent falling off from the average of the thirteen weeks of [illegible] bushels From Jan 10 to April there is shown an average weekly falling off of [illegible] 96 bushels

The receipts of wheat at lake and river ports for the week ending April 18 1874 were [illegible] bushels greater than the average of the corresponding weeks 1869-73 inclusive The receipts of wheat at the seven leading seaboard cities from January 1 to April 18 1874, exhibit probably the greatest difference as compared with previous years ever noticed The receipts during the period mentioned were [illegible] 914 bushels against 469 573 bushels the same time 1873 The average receipts for the corresponding periods 1871 3 were 168 644 bushels which makes the net increase this year [illegible] or about [illegible] per cent. This increase is simply enormous The receipts of corn at lake and river ports during the week ending April 18 1874 were [illegible] bushels against average receipts the corresponding weeks 1869 73 inclusive of [illegible] bushels From [illegible] bushels At the seven leading seaboard cities the receipts of corn from January 1 to April 18 1874 were 12 111 711 bushels against average receipts the same periods 1871 inclusive of [illegible]—a gain of over [illegible] per cent

Home Produce Market

WHEAT—The surplus yet held in the Willamette valley is now reduced to a comparatively insignificant amount and aside from transactions east of the mountains but little has been done The Liverpool market shows no signs of an advance but on the contrary latest advices indicate a dull state of affairs as likely to continue until after harvest The San Francisco exporters are now doing little or nothing in the way of shipments to Europe Our home market is likewise in a quiet condition and we hear of no buyers urging the market, though good lots could probably be placed without difficulty at $1 65@1 70 per cental

FLOUR—As several if not nearly all the country mills are now idle either for purpose of renovating or for want of raw material our market is not very abundantly supplied with ordinary country brands but the supply of extra of standard brands is ample A few shipments are still being made to San Francisco but that market offers no encouragement at present Our home market is well sustained at the quotations of $6@6 50 ꝑ bbl for best brands $4 50 for fine and superfine

OATS—There are still occasional lots coming to the market but aside from the stable men who buy their own supplies in some instances direct we find that dealers are very backward fearing the market in this cereal at this late period in the season Quotations as furnished to day range from 35 to 40c ꝑ bushel average current rates for fair lots of white including sacks bring about [illegible] cts Shipments are now not made the San Francisco market being amply stocked and no outlet

BARLEY—The local demand consumes all offering at $1 [illegible] ꝑ [illegible] which is the extreme There have no shipments been made from our State and the surplus will all be taken up unless imports are made

FEED—Owing to the stoppage of several of our State mills the supplies of this commodity are getting shorter but the advancing season has also diminished the demand so that the two circumstances have kept the market balanced and rates show no important fluctuation being $1[illegible] ꝑ ton for Bran $[illegible] for Shorts Middlings etc

HAY—While receipts continue light the advance of the season has had its usual effect to depress prices and good baled timothy is offering at $1[illegible] while loose is in fair supply at $1[illegible]

DRIED FRUIT—There being but little demand for shipping the market is dull We quote apples in sacks [illegible] at [illegible] kegs 6 cts ꝑ lb Plums with [illegible]

POTATOES—The market is still fairly supplied and the cessation of shipments has caused prices to drop to [illegible] cents per bushel

ONIONS—But few choice lots are offering and quotations for best are firm at [illegible]

APPLES—Very few and mostly inferior lots now offering Nominally quotable at [illegible] $1 per box

BACON—Market well supplied [illegible] We quote [illegible] cents ꝑ lb for shoulders 10 11 cts for sides and 11@[illegible] cts for hams

LARD—The supply in kegs is larger and rather more [illegible] exists between the article in kegs and in tins We quote the latter at 11 cents ꝑ lb and the former at [illegible] cent

BUTTER—The market now contains a supply in excess of the demand for all qualities from [illegible]

CHEESE—Receipts from our state dairies [illegible]
